

TECHNOLOGY & TELECOMMUNICATIONS

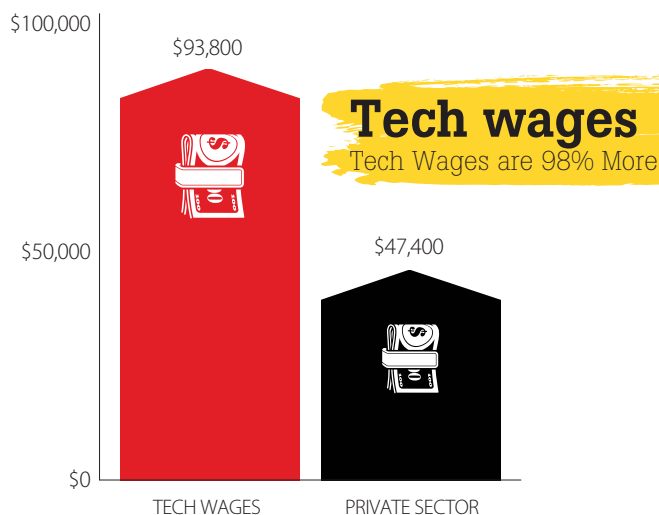

Kick Some Apps

Americans – indeed, much of the world – are all about mobile devices these days. That's keeping telecommunications employers busy, and they need talent to remain competitive and on the cutting edge of relevancy.

That's where you come in. Your military skills, whether technical or intangible, are recognized and prized by the Military Friendly® Employers that live in this industry.

The employers on the following pages are the best in the world at recruiting and retaining veterans – at tapping the talent of America's military. Many of the jobs they're recruiting for pay well, too. The average yearly salary was $62,941 for telecom workers in 2013.

Mobile devices aren't going anywhere soon. Neither are the career opportunities for you in this sector. With a little training, you could be kickin' apps in no time.

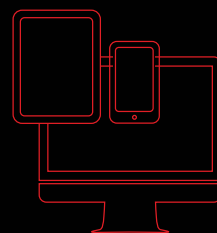

Telecom Salaries

In May 2013, this is what some professionals working in telecommunications were earning per year, on average:
